THE UNIVERSITY AS AN ADVOCATE FOR RESPONSIBLE EDUCATION ABOUT MIGRATION IN EUROPE

migration

The REMix project focuses on the social, educational and intellectual role of the European universities as agents advocating for equality and social justice in matters related to the involvement of immigrants in the European universities.

The project provides an academic contribution to the debate of migration in Europe and engages university teachers and students in the reflection on the important societal issue of migration and inclusion.

The REMix project proposes to create an innovative and interactive course for university students in several European universities; the format of the course allows students to interact and work with each other and stimulate cross-cultural discussions and experiences at transnational level.

THE MAIN OBJECTIVES OF THE PROJECT ARE:

1. To strengthen the role played by the university in advocating for constructive, responsible and inclusive education about migration in Europe.
2. To facilitate and improve the possibilities for immigrants and refugees to have access to higher education.
3. To encourage European universities to provide a rational vehicle for contributions to the knowledge and the informed debate around migration.

THE REMIX PROJECT TARGETS AND INVOLVES THREE GROUPS OF INDIVIDUALS:

1. Students and future researchers and practitioners.
2. Migrants in European countries who can benefit from the exchange of ideas about best practices to welcome them at the university.
3. University Professors who collaborate across Europe for developing a common course on migration.
